

Scope of Bargaining

Issues concerning whether particular subjects are mandatory subjects of bargaining come before the VLRB as unfair labor practice charges alleging a refusal to bargain over the subject and/or making unilateral changes in conditions of employment. The mandated scope of bargaining varies substantially under the labor relations statutes in Vermont.

A. State Employees Labor Relations Act / Judiciary Employees Labor Relations Act

The State Employees Labor Relations Act and the Judiciary Employees Labor Relations Act contain the broadest scope of bargaining. They contain the following provisions relating to the scope of bargaining: "all matters relating to the relationship between the employer and employees shall be the subject of collective bargaining except those matters which are prescribed or controlled by statute".¹

In a 1980 decision interpreting this language under the State Employees Act,² the Vermont Supreme Court declined to adopt the distinction between mandatory and permissive bargaining subjects developed in the private sector. The Court determined the statutory bargaining obligation applied if the subject was a matter "relating to the relationship between the employer and employees" and was not "prescribed or controlled by statute".

Collective bargaining was precluded only where "the outcome of any negotiations has been statutorily predetermined or expressly committed exclusively to the discretion of one party". A party asserting that a matter is not a required subject of bargaining has the burden of demonstrating the existence of a specific statutory provision which circumscribes their power to bargain on an issue.³

In scope of bargaining decisions under the State Employees Act, the VLRB and/or the Vermont Supreme Court have determined that the following are mandatory subjects of bargaining:

- wages, hours, working conditions, overtime, leave compensation, reduction in force, grievances and insurance coverage for probationary employees.⁴
- mandatory polygraph examination for non-State Police employees.⁵
- disciplinary guidance memorandum issued by the employer which lists specific instances of misconduct that “likely will lead to severe discipline up to and including immediate dismissal”.⁶
- the process by which employees will be selected for involuntary transfer and the process by which an employee's geographic responsibilities may be expanded.⁷
- work schedules.⁸
- contracting out work and partial closing of State liquor stores.⁹
- the criteria for appointment, reappointment, promotion and tenure of State Colleges faculty.¹⁰
- faculty governance.¹¹ Specifically, this includes the creation and composition of faculty assemblies; the role of the faculty assemblies in areas of academic concern such as selection of department chairpersons

- a hiring standards policy which requires state employees seeking to transfer, promote or exercise recall rights to Agency of Human Services positions to sign background check authorizations and/or submit to fingerprint testing.¹³

The following areas have been determined not to be required subjects of bargaining under the State Employees Act:

- use of polygraph examinations as an investigatory tool with respect to discipline of State Police officers.¹⁴
- authority to determine the need to transfer an employee and the size of the area employees must cover.¹⁵
- changes in performance evaluation forms and criteria.¹⁶
- a revised electronic communications policy to the extent it constituted updates to personnel rules reflecting technological changes which do not result in a substantive change in employees' conditions of employment.¹⁷
- removal of 13 of 31 Department of Finance and Management positions from the Non-Management and Supervisory Bargaining Units where the appropriate designations of the positions can be determined by the Labor

B. Municipal Employee Relations Act

Under the Municipal Employee Relations Act, "wages, hours and other conditions of employment" are mandatory bargaining subjects.¹⁹ "Wages, hours and other conditions of employment" means "any condition of employment directly affecting the economic circumstances, health, safety or convenience of employees but excluding matters of managerial prerogative."²⁰

The VLRB looks to experience under the National Labor Relations Act ("NLRA")²¹ for guidance in determining whether particular areas are mandatory subjects of bargaining. Resort to Federal precedent is a practice that has been approved by the Vermont Supreme Court in construing the Municipal Act's provisions that reflect similar provisions in the NLRA.²² Both the Municipal Act and the NLRA²³ mandate bargaining over "wages, hours and other conditions of employment". Also, the Supreme Court has indicated that it is appropriate to adopt the same distinction between mandatory and permissive subjects of bargaining as has been developed under the NLRA.²⁴

The VLRB and/or the Supreme Court have determined that the following subjects constitute mandatory subjects of bargaining under the Municipal Act:

- contracting out custodial work previously performed by bargaining unit employees where the independent contractors did the same work as

- new duties for firefighters relating to an airport crash rescue service which were substantially different from normal firefighting duties.³⁴
- drug-free workplace policy in which discipline of employees is addressed.³⁵

The VLRB has determined under the Municipal Act that the composition of a bargaining unit is not a mandatory subject of bargaining.³⁶ The VLRB has ultimate control of the bargaining unit, and to insist on a change in the composition of the bargaining unit improperly disrupts the bargaining process.³⁷

C. State Labor Relations Act

The State Labor Relations Act has a similar scope of bargaining as the Municipal Act, obligating bargaining with respect to wages, hours and other terms and conditions of employment.³⁸ Although there have been no scope of bargaining decisions issued under this private sector act, the Vermont Supreme Court has indicated that it is appropriate under this Act to adopt the same distinction between mandatory and permissive subjects of bargaining as has been developed under the National Labor Relations Act.³⁹

D. Labor Relations for Teachers Act

The Labor Relations for Teachers Act has a more restrictive scope of required bargaining, although a broad scope of permissive bargaining exists. The Teachers Act provides for negotiations "on matters of salary, related economic conditions of employment, procedures for processing complaints and grievances relating to employment, and any mutually agreed upon matters not in conflict with the statutes and laws of the State of Vermont".⁴⁰

The VLRB has issued scope of bargaining decisions in several areas under the Teachers Act. The Board has held that freezing wages, altering the grievance procedure and changing the procedure for taking personal leave all are required subjects of bargaining.⁴¹ The Board has determined that the length of teachers' workday is a required subject of bargaining.⁴² The Board also has concluded that the transfer of bargaining unit work to non-bargaining unit employees constitutes a mandatory subject of bargaining.⁴³ The test for whether work has been transferred away from a bargaining unit is whether, as a result of decisions by the employer, the bargaining unit in question has suffered an adverse impact.⁴⁴ The proper question is whether work was allocated in such a way so as to have caused the bargaining unit to lose work which, in light of past practices, the bargaining unit otherwise would have been expected to perform.⁴⁵ Also, the employer may not shift work away from the bargaining unit without bargaining simply because it is to the employer's economic advantage.⁴⁶

In a decision reflective of the restrictive scope of required bargaining under the Teachers Act, the VLRB determined in a 1981 decision that implementation of a no smoking policy was not a required subject under the Act, while noting that such a policy had been found to be a required subject of bargaining under statutes with broader scopes of bargaining.⁴⁷ The Board also has concluded that the ratification of contracts by teacher organizations does not fall within the mandated bargaining subjects under the Teachers Act. Instead, contract ratification falls within the permissive area of bargaining under the Teachers Act of “mutually agreed upon matters”.⁴⁸

Any treatment of scope of bargaining in Vermont would be inadequate if it did not mention that the VLRB has determined that the "impact" of a decision expressly committed to management's discretion is a mandatory subject of bargaining if it affects employees' conditions of employment.⁴⁹

E. Independent Direct Support Providers Labor Relations Act
